RESCUERS FIND FOUR ALIVE IN THEATRE RUINS

LORAIN, June 30.—Miraculously escaping death in the tornado which reduced the State theater to kindling and reaped a total of 70 known dead here this afternoon, four people, including one woman were taken alive from the ruins of the theater by rescue workers today.

Falling timbers had left a pit in which the four were kept from being crushed to death by the debris piled mountain high above their heads, and physicians said they had a good chance to come out of their horrifying experience of 48 hours buried alive.

McADOO, SMITH GAINING VOTES; SEE DEADLOCK

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, June 30.—Six ballots in the Democratic National convention today failed to produce a nominee.

Both William G. McAdoo and Governor Al Smith showed slight gains as the balloting proceeded, but in each case it was negligible. McAdoo polled 443 1/2 on the fourth ballot, as against 260 for Governor Smith, and the rest were still scattered among a dozen men.

OHIO GOVERNOR TAKES HAND AT LORAIN

THREE DYING WHEN ST. CAR CRUSHES AUTO

Orders More Troops, Declaring Catastrophe Beggars Description

LORAIN, June 30.—After 24 hours spent in investigating conditions in this stricken city, Governor Vic Donahey left Lorain today with the avowed intention of issuing an official appeal to the people of Ohio for funds to aid in the rehabilitation of the homes of the needy.

"It has been a long time since Ohioans have been called on to aid a sister city in distress," the governor said. "Never before has there been such a worthy call upon their generosity as exists in this stricken Lorain and vicinity. Down-state Ohio can never realize the terrible catastrophe it beggars description."

"I am employing all means at my disposal to relieve suffering in Lorain," Donahey declared, at military headquarters at the Hotel Antlers. "State troops will remain as long as they can do any good and local authorities desire their aid."

ELYRIA-LORAIN CO-OPERATE IN AID

Will Decide This Afternoon What Assistance Is Necessary

A group of representative citizens of Lorain will meet this afternoon to discuss the present condition of the city, according to Mayor Hoffman. "At that time," he said, "we will select a committee to meet with a like body from Elyria. From these meetings we will devise the best means to help which can be rendered our distressed city."

"Our people," continued the mayor, "are showing fine morale. Though we are hit a terrible blow, we will find our people looking forward to rebuilding their homes and reconstructing their stores and re-erecting them. The spirit of the people to cooperate with the city is excellent, last evening (No. 2 Continued on Page 2)

Lorain Mayor and Citizens Thank Elyrians For Aid Given

Mayor George Hoffman, of Lorain, through The Chronicle-Telegram wishes to extend his deep felt appreciation and heartfelt thanks for the fine aid and co-operation rendered by Elyria citizens to the call for help following the terrible disaster of Saturday night.

He gives special thanks to Mayor Hinkson, city officials, the police and fire department, and all other persons or agencies who rendered such efficient aid. He states that never before has the citizens of Lorain responded so fully to the call of a sister city, and that he could not say enough to fully express his appreciation for their aid.

LORAIN'S DEATH TOLL OVER 100; PROPERTY DAMAGE $25,000,000; 7000 HOMELESS; 800 INJURED

With a known casualty list of eighty-eight, which was expected to be largely increased today as the work of exploring Lorain ruins progressed, Northern Ohio, today was recovering from one of the worst disasters in its history.

Property damage may exceed $30,000,000. The list of seriously injured approximates 600. Thousands were made homeless. Hundreds of automobiles, caught by the fury of the cyclone in towns and on country roads were wrecked; several were blown into Lake Erie, and it may be that occupants of these will augment the list of dead.

With seventy bodies recovered, Lorain, heavy-hearted but with grim determination to carry on, awoke with dawn today to continue the work of removing the pile of debris that marks the place of the State Theater site where still other bodies are believed to be buried, as a result of the cyclone which struck here late Saturday, injuring hundreds and inflicting a property damage that may reach $25,000,000 or more.

The city was under the strictest of martial law today as the workers donated by two big corporations continued their work. Soldiers with drawn bayonets reminiscent of the days in Flanders patrolled the streets. Curiosity seekers were turned back with scant courtesy, or—if they were able bodied men—impressed into the work of cleaning up. The only passes good for anything were those signed by Brigadier General J. R. McQuigg in command of the Ohio National Guard units on duty here.

100 Reported Missing

Just how high the casualty list will be remains unknown today. More than 100 persons have been reported as "missing," by family and friends, in addition to identified dead, but it was thought that as the work of rescue progressed many of these would be found to have taken refuge elsewhere.

Pitiful scenes at the improvised morgues, enacted many times yesterday, were being re-enacted today, as people sought missing members of their families. In most instances, however, they did not find their loved ones, as but two bodies, those of an unidentified man of 60 or more and a man of 25, remained unidentified. Only when the ruins as unexplored give up their secrets will the exact extent of the tragedy be revealed.

Seventy-five children were in the State theater when the cyclone, like a giant hand, crushed the building at 5:15 Saturday, according to Manager Walters, who was standing in the lobby as the roof fell down and the walls crashed about him.

"If the storm had struck 30 minutes earlier, at least 1,000 persons would have been killed," Walters said. "There were 1,500, mostly children present at the afternoon performance."

22 Bodies From Theater

Estimates of the number who met death in the State building vary greatly. Fire Chief David Hatt, who was in charge of the search of the ruins, said 22 bodies were removed. More may be buried under the tons of debris in the basement and what was the auditorium into which searching parties have been unable to penetrate.

This number, however, will be small, Walters believes. He pointed out that Miss Mary Hirsch, pianist, the only person in the orchestra pit, escaped with little injury and she was probably one of the last to race from the auditorium into the lobby.

Strange and vivid descriptions of scenes and happenings preceding the following the theater disaster were being told.

As the top of the Wickens Furniture Store, adjoining the theater, fell upon the roof of the State building the structure began to buckle with a terrifying crackling sound. It was this advance warning that enabled the greater part of the audience to rush into the lobby before the auditorium was buried under the roof.

More than forty persons crowded against one side of the lobby as the floor about them gave way. "We had just reached the entrance to the lobby when there was a mighty swish of air and the walls shook," said one of those who escaped. "Pushing two children before me I fell into a stairway. When I got up it was to view a heartrending scene. Bodies of inmates of apartments overhead came crashing through the ceiling and thudded to the floor, together with tons of brick and plaster. Two women were buried up to their waists only a few feet from me. A

INDICT DOHENY, FALL, SINCLAIR BRIBERY CHARGE

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Charging conspiracy to defraud the United States in connection with the leasing of naval oil lands in California and Wyoming, indictments were returned today by a special grand jury against former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, Harry F. Sinclair and Edward Doheny, a multi-millionaire oil magnate, and the latter's son, Edward L. Doheny, Jr.

In addition to the conspiracy charges, Fall and Doheny were indicted for bribery, the charge being based on the giving of $100,000 to the secretary of the interior by the oil magnate.

Four indictments were obtained from the grand jury by Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene, the special counsel named by President Coolidge to conduct the oil lease litigation, following the exhaustive investigation made by the senate public lands under the direction of Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Democrat of Montana.

List of Charges

1. Fall and Doheny with conspiracy to defraud the government through the leasing of the Elk Hill Oil Reserve in California.
2. Fall and Sinclair with conspiracy to defraud the government through the leasing of the Teapot Dome reserve in Wyoming.
3. Fall with accepting a bribe from Doheny.
4. Doheny and his son with offering and giving a bribe to Fall.

The bribery charges were based on the fact, as admitted by Doheny in testimony before the senate oil committee that he sent $100,000 to Fall in a black satchel, his son acting as messenger.

ARTS AND SCIENCE.
On the comparative merit of the ancients and the moderns in the arts, in poetry, eloquence and all that depends on the imagination, there is widely divergent opinion. In the realm of science, however, there is no doubt about it; the moderns have eminently the advantage. It could not be otherwise.

Why? William H. Prescott, in his extraordinary history of the conquest of Peru (Chapter 1, Book 2), gives an explanation: "In the early ages of the world, as in the early period of life, there was the freshness of a morning existence, when the gloss of novelty was in everything that met the eye; when the senses, not blunted by familiarity, were more keenly alive to the beautiful, and the mind, under the influence of a healthy and natural taste, was not perverted by philosophical theory; when the simple was necessarily connected with the beautiful, and the epicurean intellect, sated by repetition, had not begun to seek for stimulants in the fantastic and the capricious.

"The realms of fancy were all untraveled, and its fairest flowers had not been gathered, nor its beauties despoiled, by the rude touch of those who affected to cultivate them. The wing of genius was not bound to earth by the cold, conventional rules of criticism, but was permitted to take its flight far and wide over the broad expanse of creation.

"Genius, indeed, might arrange and combine these facts into new forms, and elicit from their combinations new and important inferences; and in this process might almost rival in originality the creations of the poet and the artist. But if the processes of science are necessarily slow, they are sure. There is no retrograde movement in her domain. Arts may fade, the Muse become dumb, a moral lethargy may lock up the faculties of a nation, the nation itself may pass away and leave only the memory of its existence, but the stores of science it has gathered up will endure forever.

"As other nations come upon the stage, and new forms of civilization arise, the monuments of art and of imagination, productions of an older time, will be as an obstacle in the path of improvement. They cannot be built upon; they occupy the ground which the new aspirant for immortality would cover. The whole work is to be done over again, and other forms of beauty—whether higher or lower in the scale of merit, but unlike the past—must arise to take a place by their side.

CAILLAUX IS SEEN AS IN POSITION TO STAGE COMEBACK

Joseph Caillaux.

Will Caillaux come back? That is the question in France as the radicals with whom he is allied, are preparing to take over the government from Raymond Poincaré, decisively defeated by them in the general election. Caillaux, former premier, was banished from Paris early in the war after being accused of treason. It was thought at the time that he was done for politically, but the coup of the radicals may enable him to win back his once all-powerful position in France.

Menace of Drug Traffic Threatens Nation

Government investigation reveals 2,000,000 addicts

Statistics Show Consumption of Vicious Narcotic Drugs Ten Times Greater in the United States Than in All of Europe.

By D. A. HEALY

Is the star of American ascendancy beginning to wane? Is the amazing growth of the narcotic drug traffic a harbinger of the New World's decay? Will history repeat itself?

Ancient Greece, having conquered the Persia of Xerxes and Cyrus, fell prey to a visitation of effeminacy learned from her captives. Rome, in the rugged hardness of her prime, overcame Greece, only to fall fatally stricken with the degenerating luxury of Athens. America, economically, has mastered the world. Is she in turn to be mastered by the world's greatest vice—surrender to the ecstasies of the opium poppy?

This is the question soberly propounded by government investigators, by public health authorities and by students of the narcotic drug evil, after a ten year campaign of offense which has resulted only in the decrease of the use of the drug, caffeine, an evil, but a lesser one.

There was a traffic in opium as far back as the Civil War. But its growth to menacing proportions is an aspect of recent years. In 1909 there was imported for legitimate medical uses 470,000 pounds of the opium poppy's yield. By 1919, the space of a single decade, the figure had risen to 730,000 pounds, enough to supply 36 doses to every man, woman and child in the country.

Opium Smuggling Highly Profitable

These are the facts of the recorded imports, and take no cognizance of smuggled opium. Conservative authorities declare that the traffic of opium smugglers in our seaports and along the Mexican and Canadian borders is as great as the trade through legitimate channels. They say that the figures given above must be doubled before a true estimate of the drug problem is reached. Their statements are less astonishing when it is known that $10 worth of opium in Hongkong is worth $150, wholesale, in San Francisco or New York. By comparison, the profits of "Rum Row" pale into insignificance.

Drug smugglers work all kinds of tricks to get by the revenue officers—a cavity in the heel of the shoe—making a compartment in a bible—preparing special underwear—using the centers of lemons and oranges. One revenue officer found two duck legs in a workman's lunch basket stuffed with opium.

But like the traffic at the twelve-mile limit, the drug syndicates have their bootleggers, usually addicts themselves, who peddle morphine, heroin and cocaine, as well as the raw opium. The bootlegger of drugs sets his trap for the youth, for children still in school. Among them are veritable "Fagins" employing children as their agents in the corruption of other children.

According to Graham Mulhall, president of the Narcotic Drugs Control League and formerly First Deputy Commissioner of the New York State Department of Narcotic Drug Control, many a school in the congested sections of big cities has its Artful Dodger and its Charley Bates distributing samples of heroin to their playmates. Once the children learn the drug's exhilarating thrill, they are introduced to the bootlegger. Thereafter at noon and recess periods they can find him in a convenient alley ready to trade pinches of heroin for nickels and dimes. Graham Mulhall has terminated the career of many a heroin "Fagin."

Learn Habit from Associates

It is mainly through associates, juvenile or adult, that the drug addict begins. Of the 8,000 cases studied by the Health Department of New York City, seventy per cent confessed they got their "first shot of coke" from a friend. Moreover, seventy per cent were under 30 years of age. It had been supposed that illness was responsible for much drug taking. This cause was found in only five per cent of the cases. An interesting angle of the study was developed in the fact that nearly a third of the addicts were truck drivers, motormen, conductors or employed to some other phase of transportation.

Burning the candle at the social as well as the business end was found to have started many a strapping on his narcotic career. The youth, after an exhausting day in factory or office, takes his girl to a dance. As it nears midnight the weight of fatigue presses him heavily. He wonders why everyone is not agreed that it is time to go home. But among the revellers he notes several whose flashing eyes and high spirits make them the life of the party. He is puzzled, for he knows their daytime tasks are as exacting as his. There is a brief conference in the coat room. Some one says, "Here, take a whiff of this and watch the old pep come back." He does, fatigue is banished, but the death of his soul has set in.

New York Leads in Addicts

New York State leads the nation with its 35,000 recorded drug addicts. Then come Tennessee, Missouri, Virginia, Michigan, Illinois, Georgia, Oklahoma and Massachusetts in the order of addicts reported, irrespective of population.

Police officials in 1263 cities of 5,000 population or over report 1,800 drug peddlers securing most of their supplies from Canada and Mexico.

A questionnaire sent by the Treasury Department to the health officers of big cities shows nearly 2,000,000 known drug addicts, while reliable authorities put the total as high as 4,000,000.

The annual economic loss suffered by the nation through the drug traffic is almost incalculable. There is first the sum of $2,000,000,000 in service that might be rendered by men and women were they not incapacitated by drug habits. The addicts themselves spend for their dope at least $100,000,000 annually and 1,000,000,000 dollars is annually spent by the State for the upkeep of institutions and agencies ministering to addicts, and for the maintenance of drug-ridden individuals who have become public charges.

DRUGS DESTROYED BY GOVERNMENT AGENTS

the only way of progress. A glance at what education has accomplished in the field of caffeine—a drug, with a definite pharmacological effect, which gives the "kick" to coffee and tea may be enlightening.

Caffeine Education Effective

Here was a drug habit more firmly entrenched than any other, yet the persistent and insistent emphasis placed by the medical profession on the dangers inherent in coffee and tea have materially decreased their consumption. The campaign against caffeine had to be one of education to the general public. The U. S. Bureau of Education at Washington has carried on a particularly extensive and effective campaign to keep coffee and tea out of the diet of school children. As to its effectiveness the following facts are testimony.

Professor Samuel C. Prescott, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who devoted three years to the study of coffee, found that the caffeine content varies from one to one and one-half per cent by weight, and averages one and three-quarters grains for every strong cup of coffee served at the table. On the basis of his figures and those of the Department of Commerce, there was in the coffee consumed in 1920 a caffeine content totalling 21,255,932 pounds. In 1921 coffee consumption fell, and the caffeine total was a little over 20,000,000 pounds. In 1922 the caffeine content in coffee importations fell again, this time to 18,626,816 pounds. During this period the per capita consumption of coffee fell from nearly 13 pounds a year to less than 11 pounds.

In 1918 tea importations amounted to 151,314,932 pounds. In 1920, this total diminished to 97,326,106 pounds, and in 1922 it fell to $6,141,949. That year the per capita consumption of tea was about three-fourths of a pound, almost the lowest it had been since 1830, when the Department of Commerce's record of imports was begun.

Here then is proof of what one group can do to curtail the use of a drug. Is it a far cry to say that public opinion aroused and directed would abolish all drug evils?

Public officials have failed. Altruistic organizations have failed; it is submitted that only the arousing of national conscience by education will prevail.

Pocket Flashlight's Beam Brings Rescue Ship to Crew of Seventeen Adrift in Lifeboats.

By W. H. DENNIS

Publisher, The Herald, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

HOW an ordinary pocket flashlight saved the lives of seventeen men from a watery grave was the remarkable and thrilling story recited to me by Captain L. W. Vatcher, first officer of the steamer Obernai, which foundered March 8 on a voyage from Louisburg, Cape Breton, to Port au Basque, Newfoundland. He told me the story when he arrived here in Halifax on the rescue ship.

Captain Vatcher is a master mariner of twenty-two years' sea experience. He has been in many perilous situations during that time but never before was the call so close as in the present instance.

When it was found the steamer could not remain afloat in the heavy storm, the "S. O. S." signal was sent out. The Kungsholm, Captain Jack Gubbe, of the Swedish-American line, was then about 200 miles distant but received the call and answered that it was proceeding with all speed to the rescue.

Lifeboats Launched

Lifeboats were made ready on the Obernai and at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon the first boat was launched. The call for help had been sent out in the morning. It was thought the Kungsholm might be able to reach the distressed steamer before she foundered, but at sundown there was no sign of her, so the captain of the Obernai decided to abandon ship. This was accomplished with great difficulty, the boat in charge of Vatcher being badly damaged; so much so that three men were kept balling constantly for twelve hours.

"Night came," said Captain Vatcher, "and it was an unusually dark night; one of those inky black nights we sailors sometimes experience when forced into trying positions and when we most stand in need of light. The wind was blowing a gale; seas boomed over our little boat and everything on board was soaked through and through.

"We knew the Kungsholm was coming. We knew we should see her when she came near, but how were our officers and crew to see in on such a night? As you know every lifeboat is supplied with candles, but no lanterns, but to see in a night, or to light a flare, was out of the question. This was a desperate situation and I tried again, but with no results, for everything was wet and to light a match was out of the question. No match, even could we light one, would stay lit long enough to ignite the rocket or flare.

"We had given the captain of the Kungsholm our position that morning, but we had drifted miles to leeward since then. For this, we knew he would make allowance. As it was, he came to the position indicated by us and then worked in zigzag fashion to leeward. We saw the Kungsholm when she came up, crossing and re-crossing several miles of water, but a small lifeboat on a boiling ocean is a small thing—a very small thing—for it is hidden from sight by the great seas more than half the time.

"Flashlight Attracts Rescuers. "There was every danger, every probability that the Kungsholm would pass us by in the darkness. The human voice could not reach that ship. A few more hours in that open unseaworthy boat meant oblivion. We stood face to face with death. Only a few hundred yards away was succor.

"It was at this time I thought of the flashlight in my coat pocket. A minute later and its beam shone over the water.

"We were saved. The crew of the Kungsholm was watching for a sign from us, watching the face of the angry seas for a small dark object that might be a boat. The whole ship's company on the Kungsholm were on the watch, and there was no mistaking the sign.

far to make us all forget the trying experience of the preceding hours.

"Then you would recommend the flashlight as part of the equipment of steamers and sailing vessels?" I asked Captain Vatcher.

"I certainly would," he replied. "Matches get wet and wet matches will not light. The flashlight is always ready for service. Water cannot extinguish it. Neither can the wind. Not only would I recommend it for the equipment of steamers and sailing ships, but I would recommend it to Bank fishermen.

Tragedies of the Bank. "You know Bank fishermen are continually going astray in their dories while attending their trawls. We see the schooners come into port with their flag half-mast. We know what that means. Some members of the crew are adrift somewhere in their dories, or lie at the bottom of the ocean, for night comes on and the schooner has no means of locating the dory in the dark. A flashlight in every boat would mean the saving of many lives; the saving of much suffering and hardship.

"Oh yes, I will swear by the flashlight from this time on. It saved my life and the lives of my sixteen mates.

"A good little friend," he added, as he passed me an ordinary nickel-plated flashlight. "No person should travel without one."

Story of Captain Gubbe

The lifeboats had drifted sixteen

Whose pocket flashlight saved the lives of seventeen men adrift fifteen hours in stormy Atlantic.

Went Down

of the Obernai's boats came in sight. Oil was distributed on the sea, ladders, ropes and lights were thrown over the ship's side and all was made ready to help the wet and frozen men on board.

"Shortly after the first one, the second boat was sighted and in about fifteen minutes all hands—seventeen men—were on board the Kungsholm. They were tired and worn after fifteen hours' exposure. An electric flashlight was the only means they had to display distress signals as everything had been soaked by the turbulent seas. The endurance of the crew was remarkable, considering the time spent in the boats and the temperature of the water which was near the freezing point.

Revived With Coffee. "The 526 passengers on the ship were almost all on deck watching the rescue and they cheered as the famished and half-frozen men were brought on board. We fed them hot coffee and biscuits, and the former seemed to warm them immediately. They were cheery

"Wireless messages were exchanged and the captain of the steamer Obernai reported that the ship was taking water fast and the stokehold plates were awash.

"Ship heading east," one of the messages ran, "making about three knots, heading steadily growing gale," require immediate assistance.

Kungsholm Changes Course

"The steamer Kyle, which was about fourteen miles off Cape Race, rushed to the assistance of the Obernai, but could not expect to be on the place before 8 a. m. on the 9th. The Kungsholm, after hearing that no ships in the vicinity were nearer than thirteen hours, changed her course at 6:30 a. m. and headed for the sinking ship.

"During the whole day a heavy fog prevailed and the hope of finding the steamer Obernai diminished when, at 10:55 a. m., it was reported that the crew had taken to the boats. The utmost efforts were made on board the Kungsholm to increase the speed, but owing to the growing sea the ship did not reach the position given by the Obernai, which was approximately 1:30 a. m., when a faint light was observed on the port bow.

"The liner followed up this signal, and found the two lifeboats with their occupants drenched and numbed by the cold; a rope was lowered over the side of the liner, and the men pulled to the deck one at a time, Capt. Dicks being the last to reach safety. So serious was their condition that they could not have held out for three more hours.

Placed in Ship's Hospital

"The trouble was not all over, two of the men being immediately placed in the ship's hospital and the remainder given hot baths to get them warm. Great trouble was experienced in this regard, for the men had been immersed in the cold Atlantic for so long that their circulation had practically stopped. Stimulus was given to them, and they were looked after by the ship's physician. Warm clothing was provided and everything possible done for their welfare by the crew of the liner."

When the ship docked at Halifax all of the shipwrecked crew had fully recovered, and disembarked from the ship, from where they returned to their homes.

The names of the shipwrecked men are: Captain John Dicks, of North Sydney; Chief Officer L. W. Vatcher, of Halifax; William Hollday, of South Shields, Scotland; Fred Edwards, of Glasgow; J. Troker, of North Sydney; Simon McKeller, of Lardose, Cape Breton; Alexander Hann, of Petta, Nfld.; George Banfield, of Bay L'Angeant, Nfld.; William Drake and Edward Power, of Marysville, Nfld.; Albert Jensen, of Harbor Breton; Power Birklie, of English Harbor West, Nfld.; Edward Babcock, of Sydney; John McLean, of Glasgow; Charles Phalen, of Port Morien, Cape Breton; J. T. Dobbin, Whitney Pier, Cape Breton; Donald Curry, Sydney.

In speaking of their treatment on board of the Kungsholm the men were unanimous in their praise of the officers and crew of the liner, expressing in plain, blunt words their outspoken praise, in the language of deep sincerity that every mariner knows.

"The cause of the sinking of the steamer Obernai, according to Captain J. T. Dicks, was an unaccountable leakage in the hull, which caused the water to gain on the pumps, finally extinguishing the fire. The steamer Obernai was owned by W. N. McDonald, of Sydney, and left Louisburg on March 1, bound for Port au Basque, N. F., having on board a cargo of 1,135 tons of coal.

"We knew the Kungsholm was coming. We knew we should see her when she came near, but how were our officers and crew to see in on such a night? HOW THE HEALTH AND VIGOR OF THE FOOT ARE REVEALED BY EVERY STEP YOU TAKE Flaws and Weaknesses Invisible to the Eye, Scientifically Revealed by Pedographic Imprints of Sole—Beauty of Lady's Foot Disclosed in Terms of Health and Strength.

A great many persons have incipient foot weaknesses, which, if properly treated in time, will admit of correction and cure. Of 550 school children examined in New York City, 262 or 73 per cent had weak feet, according to a Public Health Report of the U. S. Public Health Service, which observed that if the shoes were neglected "they will tend to cripple and to impair the efficiency of those affected." In this article Dr. William M. Scholl of Chicago, famous foot hygienist, tells one way in which foot defects and merits are revealed, and gives some valuable advice on the care of the feet. Foot health is the first requisite for beautiful feet, the Doctor says.

By William M. Scholl, M. D.

I am sometimes asked what constitutes a beautiful foot, what are the standards by which it is to be judged.

I am more concerned with the development of healthy feet, for health and beauty of the feet are closely associated.

But so far as standards of foot beauty go, the ideal foot as envisioned by famous sculptors might help to answer the question were it not for the fact that standards of foot beauty must vary to conform to the height, weight, bone structure, and other physical characteristics of the body. But from the time of Phidias and Polyclitus the finest work of the ancient em-bodied fully the old motto of "a healthy mind in a healthy body."

The standards of bodily perfection, including those of the foot, presuppose a healthy physique, a Greek balancing of sensitiveness and sturdiness.

The Greek sculptural masterpieces do not show flat-foot, a contrast with today when 17 1/2 per cent of the first million men in mobilization camps showed some form of flat-foot and 74 per cent of a body of school girls of grammar grades showed flat-foot in New York showed weak foot.

Widely different standards may each represent a strong, unblemished foot. There are almost as many types of feet as there are individuals. Feet that may be ideal, or almost so, in the case of short, stout person, would be unsuited to the thin individual. Some persons have naturally high arches. Others have low arched feet. Some feet are comparatively thin and narrow, yet strong and symmetrical. Feet that seem perfect when sustaining no weight, may disclose weakness and flatten out when weight is placed upon them.

The Real Criterion of Foot Beauty Making due allowance for different types, there is only one reliable criterion for foot beauty in the minds of orthopedic specialists. And that is health, strength, and grace. These requisites are practically synonymous. A weak foot cannot remain a thoroughly healthy foot. It soon becomes distorted with the superimposed weight of the heavy human body.

Happily, weak feet can often be made strong and healthy, and distorted feet restored to normal. Many orthopedic specialists who recognize the difficulty in determining by hard and fast rule, just how nearly a foot approaches perfection are now employing a more scientific way of finding the strength and health of the foot. They have invoked the law of physics to help in scientifically diagnosing the condition of the foot, in prescribing gentle exercises or temporary corrective appliances, when required, and in determining the type of shoe best adapted to a given type of foot. The foot is a delicate structure. It has to be at once so strong that it will bear the entire weight of your body with whatever load is added to it, and so flexible and elastic as to give you grace and ease of motion. The frame work is held by ligaments, muscles, and tendons through which arteries, veins, and nerves form a wondrous net work. When the muscles become weakened and relaxed the foot may give way under continued pressure, and weak arches or flat-foot may result. In the case of metatarsalgia, pain in the forepart of the foot is often caused by the pressure of the misplaced bones on nerve centers. When the bones of the foot become misplaced, they have no power in themselves to reassume normal position. In cases of depressed arches or flat-foot it is advisable to temporarily wear surgical plates or arch supports to give the proper correction and stimulate muscular control. Often gentle exercises are prescribed to strengthen the muscles and help them to maintain the arches. Exercises help to resist weak foot. They also help to make the foot more beautiful.

Foot Health Helps Give the foot the care that it deserves. If you have no foot troubles now guard against them with care. Do not wear shoes that are too tight. They shut off the circulation and cramp the muscles. Shoes that are too short under the normal action of the foot and are sure to give you trouble. To wear good looking shoes is a natural desire; but avoid extremely pointed toes and extremely high heels. Remember that weak feet often distort the shoe.

Don't wear stockings that are too short. They are often instrumental in causing deformity of the feet as ill-fitting shoes. Modern civilization is responsible for widespread deterioration of the feet. Among them are hard, flat pavements that offer no resilience to the feet. They weaken the muscles causing the arches to relax. Passive amusements are substituted for physical exercise, such as excessive joy riding and undue attendance at motion pictures in preference to a brisk walk in the open. Everyone should walk at least two miles, briskly in the open air each day to keep the feet in good condition. Defective feet are common among persons who make little use of them. If you daily work calls for long standing, try to change your position as frequently as possible. Like the arms, chest, bust, leg and other portions of the body the feet respond readily to care and can be greatly strengthened and improved in appearance by suitable exercise.

The time to start the care of the feet is in infancy. Do not distort the movement or growth of the little baby's feet by forcing them and its limbs into tight shoes and stockings. See that the shoes, when it gets old enough to wear them, are properly fitted, ample in width and length, free from nails, rough seams, and stitching. Proper fitting of shoes and stockings are the chief items for foot comfort and beauty. Bathing and massaging will help the feet. And do not neglect brisk walking in the open air.

Everyone should walk at least two miles, briskly in the open air each day to keep the feet in good condition. Defective feet are common among persons who make little use of them. If you daily work calls for long standing, try to change your position as frequently as possible. Like the arms, chest, bust, leg and other portions of the body the feet respond readily to care and can be greatly strengthened and improved in appearance by suitable exercise.

The time to start the care of the feet is in infancy. Do not distort the movement or growth of the little baby's feet by forcing them and its limbs into tight shoes and stockings. See that the shoes, when it gets old enough to wear them, are properly fitted, ample in width and length, free from nails, rough seams, and stitching. Proper fitting of shoes and stockings are the chief items for foot comfort and beauty. Bathing and massaging will help the feet. And do not neglect brisk walking in the open air.

With due allowance for varied types of feet, a strong, healthy, and beautiful foot leaves a clean-cut imprint. The great longitudinal arch is free of the ground. In the perfect foot the anterior metatarsal arch should be high, the three tripod bearing points of the foot, at the heel, and at the base of the little and great toe should show the proper amount of pressure. The heel, great toe, and little toe should be clearly outlined.

Many persons with weak ankles, usually associated with weak arches, show a rotating heel bone. In a recent case the os calcis or heel bone was forced down and back. The astragalus was slightly rotated, affecting the scaphoid, and metatarsal bones.

These conditions were indicated by the imprint. In the case of arch weakness, the increased contact of the sole of the foot with the ground is to be read plainly in the broader, heavier imprint, while, frequently, darker shadings on the inside edge show how the weight is thrown to the inner border of the foot. The impression of an advanced type of flat-foot with the entire sole of the foot in contact with the ground can be immediately recognized.

The foot impression test invokes the old Greek standards of strength and symmetry. It determines the ability of the foot to bear the weight of the body as nature intended it should do. This fundamental test measures the beauty of the human foot in terms of health and strength. A foot with incipient weakness soon loses its graceful curvatures under the strain of everyday use.

Egyptians Respond Call For Help To Afflicted Lorain

By OTTO MISCHKA

Rallying to the assistance of an afflicted city, Egyptians are doing much to relieve the suffering in Lorain's catastrophe.

Egyptian firemen and policemen were among the first to rally and send squads to Lorain. Fifteen firemen worked all Saturday night and an equal number were sent to Lorain Sunday.

Many Egyptian volunteers assisted in carrying out dead from demolished buildings and in rescuing the living. It is estimated that three hundred Egyptians contributed their services.

Members of the local Legion responded to the need of assistance in guard and patrol duty. Egyptian firemen worked all night removing debris from the Mills seed store on Broadway. Mr. Mills had left and Mrs. Mills was in charge of the store. A customer had his legs pinned in and resuscitated and when he regained consciousness he said that Mrs. Mills had been directly in back of him. Mr. Mills stayed all Saturday night with the rescuers.

Mrs. Mills' body was recovered at 5 p. m. Sunday.

In the Mills store Egyptian firemen heard a peeping. Digging through three feet of debris they rescued eight little chickens, all unharmed from their experience.

Egyptians Give Aid

One of the first Egyptians to render relief assistance at Lorain was Mrs. "Rags" Chuley, who took down a truck load of sandwiches, fifty gallons of milk and many gallons of hot coffee and electricity.

Mr. Kalay of the Egyptian Red Cross and staff of workers was also one of the first to respond and are rendering tremendous relief service at Lorain.

Mrs. H. C. Stevens and group of Egyptian women sent bandages and medical accessories to help care for the injured.

A. L. Garford and T. T. Robinson and others rendered relief work at Lorain Saturday night and Sunday.

Egyptian firemen at Lorain said that at the State Theatre where the worst toll was exacted, 250 tickets had been sold for the matinee and that between 50 and 60 had left the theatre. How many escaped is not known but the dead and injured here alone will be over 100.

Oscar Dunn telephoned The Chronicle-Telegram that he would be one to give $25 in aid to the tragedy to the suffering of Lorain. He also offered his truck and whole crew in cleaning up the debris.

"Hello Girls' Heroines

With the phone and telegraph wires out of Lorain being down, the responsibility of getting communications to the outside world rested entirely upon the Egyptian Telephone Co. and its corps of telephone operators.

The operators tackled a Hercules task and performed their work admirably, undergoing a grueling test which appeared beyond physical endurance.

Manager A. J. Curran spent Saturday night at the telephone office and directed the work of the telephone operators in opening up impaired lines and getting news.

The telephone operators were handicapped considerably by superhuman calls and Manager Curran asked patrons to use phone calls for the most important business and to relent on gossiping until the present emergency is over.

Radio Big Help

Radio played an important part in the catastrophe at Lorain. A Cleveland station broadcasted at midnight for assistance to all northern Ohio towns and cities for doctors, nurses, Salvation Army work, Red Cross and ex-service men to hasten to the scene. Before daylight five truck loads of ex-service men and doctors from Akron were at the scene of the disaster. A druggist from Youngstown responded with medical supplies having driven all night.

The efficient and prompt aid rendered by the Cleveland Red Cross has brought response from cities within a hundred mile radius.

Miss Anna K. Vogler, superintendent of Flower hospital in Toledo received the emergency call from Cleveland Red Cross at 3 a. m. She was unable to make telephone connections but has hastened to the scene of disaster to lend any assistance that she might be able to render.

Police Given Test

Thousands of auto patrollers in Lorain Saturday night and Sunday were tested by the storm and the only officers to the affliction.

Police officers stood on duty all night, stopping autos and turning back from going to Lorain. The officers kept clear for the numerous emergency runs through here to Lorain or Youngstown, carrying relief supplies, bandages, doctors and nurses in search of supplies and aid.

The business section of this city was one continuous stream of automobiles Sunday. The Lake road was closed and all east and west traffic was obliged to come this way. In addition thousands of would be sight seers passed through here in an effort to get to Lorain.

The traffic problem was a tough one and volunteers from the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars assisted at street intersections and performed excellent service in directing traffic. It was last night before their services could be dispensed with.

Life Guard Hero.

Among the stories of heroism that are told of the Lorain disaster is that of a life guard, name unknown, who was on duty at the municipal beach when the storm broke.

He saw the storm coming, and states that when he saw the cold like cloud approaching he yelped to those in the water to run to the shelter house. They did and he herded them all into the basement of the building. When the storm struck and tore the building down he was standing at the door and was blown fifty feet away.

He saw four people rush from the building into the lake and promptly recovered himself and plunged in after them. He pulled them out of the water after a struggle and undoubtedly saved their lives as a small tidal wave followed the storm and they would have been swept away.

Those who stayed where he placed them were saved, but when the storm broke a number tried to go out doors, and seventeen bodies were later taken from the ruins of the building.

Carl Reedy.

A false report has been circulated in this city that Dr. Carl Reedy was injured at Lorain, Saturday.

Little Court Business.

Court business is practically at a stand still today. Many cases are in the hands of Lorain attorneys and none of them were in court today compelling the cases to be continued. Judge W. B. Thompson got through the lines but found little to do except hearing a small attachment case.

The judge states that fortunately his beautiful home was not in the path of the storm, and he did not know of the disaster until the arrival of his son, who had walked through the rain and mud for a long distance.

Donates Merchandise.

Frank Burson, manager of the Egyptian Dry Goods Co. has made a generous offer to aid the needy in devastated Lorain. He sent a communication to Police Chief E. J. Stankard, offering to donate $500 worth of merchandise such as blankets, sheets, pillow cases or anything else needed for the immediate use that he has in stock. He stipulates that not over $10 worth of merchandise shall go to each family, which would mean that fifty families can be assisted. He agrees to deliver the merchandise to any one bearing an order from the chief. The order will probably be turned over to the Red Cross.

This is but one instance of the quick response of Egyptians to the call for help. Homes were canvassed for help in the way of bandages and blankets and a large number were contributed. Grocers, meat dealers, milk men and other lines of business were quick to respond and many truck loads were hauled to the stricken city for distribution.

VERMILION HAS VICTIM IN CYCLONE

VERMILION, June 30.—Residents of this place suffered severely from the late storm. Charles Stump was in Lorain when the wind struck his auto. He was killed when his neck was broken and his wife also sustained serious injuries. Mabel Holland was at work for the Lorain Dry Goods Co. and was also injured. Mrs. Glenn Martin had her shoulder and arm broken.

Courts Calling Miss Browne Again So She'll Attempt Second Comeback

Three years ago, after an absence of seven years from active tournament play, Miss Mary Browne of California, essayed to come back in the tennis games. She reached the final round in the national tournament and for a set or so threatened to regain the national title she held in 1912-13-14. Now she is preparing to make another bid for the championship.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Joking Bet That Dicky Made Madge.

DICKY was so absurd in his anxiety to have me worn Lillian against investigating the Marks family that the impulse to laugh almost got the better of the cold anger which was rapidly taking possession of me.

"She'll only make herself ridiculous," he had just said, with as much seriousness as if he really believed what he was saying. Yet I knew that he yielded to no one in his admiration for Lillian's courage, sagacity and resourcefulness.

If any one else had made this statement his own lips had just uttered he would have been the first to declare heatedly that while Lillian might be a fool, she was a fool for her to be so absurd. The fact that he could speak of her in such slighting terms argued a most unusual state of mind.

"Now from affection only, the misfortune and calamities of life, or the imperfections of nature, may become the objects of ridicule. Surely he hath a very ill-framed mind, who can look on ugliness, infirmity, or poverty, as ridiculous in themselves; nor do I believe any man living who meets a dirty fellow riding through the streets in a cart, is struck with an idea of the ridiculous from it; but if he should see the same figure descend from his coach and six, or bolt from his chair with his hat under his arm, he would then begin to laugh, and with justice."

"In the same manner, were we to enter a poorhouse and behold a wretched family shivering with cold and languishing with hunger, it would not incline us to laughter, (at least we must have very diabolical natures, if it would); but should we discover there a grate, instead of coals, adorned with flowers, empty plate or china dishes on the sideboard, and any other indication of riches or finery either on their persons or in their furniture, we might then be excused, for ridiculing so fantastical an appearance."

John Locke (in his essay "On Education") is more brief: "Affectation is an awkward and forced imitation of what should be genuine and easy, wanting the beauty that accompanies what is natural."

Geniuses and "geniuses."

"JACK OF ALL TRADES and master of none," runs the old saying. Edgar Allan Poe, himself a literary jack of all trades and a refutation of the unerring truth of the proverb, observed, perhaps bitterly, that "Let a man succeed ever so evidently—even so demonstrably—in many different displays of genius and the envy of criticism will agree with the popular view in denying him more than talent in any."

"Thus a poet who has achieved a great poem, should be cautious not to distinguish himself in other walks of letters. In especial, let him make no effort in Science—unless anonymously, or with the view of waiting patiently the judgment of posterity."

"Because universal or even versatile geniuses have rarely or never been known, therefore, thinks the world, none such can ever be. A 'therefore' of this kind is, with the world conclusive."

"But what is fact, as taught us by analysis of mental power? Simply that the highest genius—that genius which all men instantaneously acknowledge as such—which acts upon individuals, as well as upon the mass, by a species of magnetism incomprehensible but irresistible, and never related—that this genius which demonstrates itself in the simplest gesture—or even by the absence of all—that this genius which speaks without a voice and flashes from the unopened eye—is but the result of generally latent mental power existing in a state of absolute proportion—so that no one faculty has undue predominance."

"That fractious genius—that 'genius' in the popular sense—which is but the manifestation of the abnormal predominance of some one faculty over all the others—and, of course, at the expense and to the detriment of all the others—is a result of mental disease, or rather organic malformation of the brain—in this and nothing more, not only with such 'fractious' but, turned aside from the path indicated by its predominant faculty, but, even when pursuing this path—when producing those works in which, certainly it is best calculated to succeed—will give unmistakable indications to unobservance in respect to general intellect."

"The true genius, on the other hand, is necessarily, if not universal in its manifestations, at least capable of universality; and, if, attempting all things, it succeeds in one rather better than in another, this is merely on account of a certain bias by which it is led to with more earnestness in one direction than in the other. With equal zeal, it would succeed equally in all."

Poe does not mention it, but Leonardo di Vinci is a shining example of the universal genius."

IN SUMMING up his consideration of the question, Poe says: "What the world calls 'genius' is the state of mental disease arising from the undue predominance of some one of the faculties. The works of such genius are never sound in themselves, and, in especial, always betray the general mental insanity."

"The proportion of the mental faculties, in a case where the general mental power is not inordinate, gives that result which we distinguish as talent;—and the talent is greater or less, as the general mental power is greater or less; and, secondly, as the proportion of the faculties is more or less absolute."

"The proportion of the faculties, in a case where the mental power is inordinately great gives that result which is the true genius (but which on account of the proportion and seeming simplicity of its works, is seldom acknowledged to be so); and the genius is greater or less, first as the general mental power is more or less inordinately great; and, secondly, as the proportion of the faculties is more or less absolute."

Geniuses and "geniuses."

SANDUSKY HAS TOLL OF 7 KILLED

200 Families Homeless and Property Damage Is Estimated at $1,500,000

SANDUSKY, O., June 30.—With 7 known dead from 200 to 300 families homeless, 100 injured, and property damage estimated at $1,500,000, Sandusky, today was taking stock of the greatest disaster in its history.

The water service, put out of commission by the fury of the cyclone, was restored to service late yesterday, and the menace of fire and epidemic thus removed.

The dead are: R. F. McKee, B. & O. freight engineer. Minette Margard, Jake Schafer, B. & O. watchman. William Hampton, truck driver. Howard Van Blaricum. Howard Webster, Castalia, O. Mrs. Julius Kardatzler, Vickery O.

The agony of waiting, of uncertainty, caused by the knowledge that a loved one is missing—be it aged mother, husband or fondest child—in a catastrophe such as this section of Ohio has never known and the subsequent anguish and distress, all this was reflected in the faces of the men and women who besieged the information desk at Memorial hospital and all hospitals in this vicinity this morning for news concerning him or her who had failed to show up since five o'clock last evening.

Hope, ever eternal, warring with a sane realization that the worst must be the inevitable, had written the lines of its struggle on their faces, as they came to inquire in lips that were dry concerning him or her who was missing.

Father Hunts Son

"Was my little boy, Mick, brought in?" inquired a father, whose speech and dress revealed him a foreigner, as he tried to make himself understood and the kind physician assured him that there was not such a name on the records. But the father pleaded that he had looked everywhere and surely he must be here. "Is there any little boys of about six years old in this hospital?" was his next question for he explained his boy could not speak very well. But others were clamoring for information, doctors were wanted, a lady related how her friend was lucky and had escaped injury save for having her nose severed from her face. But the physician was answering the foreigner. "Yes there were several small boys brought in. Step to one side, and I will take you to them." The father's face lightened up as he disappeared around the corner. Nurses rushed in with their record blanks and they had been on duty all night long.

Arrive Too Late

A group arrived from out of town, who had received word yesterday that a friend was dying in the hospital, an aged man in any way caught in the Lorain disaster, but the group had not been able to come to his bedside until this morning on account of the storm. They were told that they had arrived too late. He whom they had asked for, had passed on to the Great Beyond.

It was impossible this morning for the hospital to give out a detailed report of the extent of the injuries sustained but with the exception of Mary Tumas, George Ackerman and George Copas, the condition of injured was reported as being good.

The list of those injured not being cared for at Memorial hospital are as follows and are a from Lorain, unless otherwise specified:

Injured Brought Here

Roan Sidel, 526 Reed avenue Lorain, fractured skull.

Arthur Dieckrich, 1838 East 34th street, Lorain, wound on right hand.

Pathetic Scenes At Hospital Here: 40 Are Admitted

By MISS JOSEPHINE FAY

answering the foreigner. "Yes there were several small boys brought in. Step to one side, and I will take you to them." The father's face lightened up as he disappeared around the corner. Nurses rushed in with their record blanks and they had been on duty all night long.

Arrive Too Late

A group arrived from out of town, who had received word yesterday that a friend was dying in the hospital, an aged man in any way caught in the Lorain disaster, but the group had not been able to come to his bedside until this morning on account of the storm. They were told that they had arrived too late. He whom they had asked for, had passed on to the Great Beyond.

It was impossible this morning for the hospital to give out a detailed report of the extent of the injuries sustained but with the exception of Mary Tumas, George Ackerman and George Copas, the condition of injured was reported as being good.

The list of those injured not being cared for at Memorial hospital are as follows and are a from Lorain, unless otherwise specified:

Roan Sidel, 526 Reed avenue Lorain, fractured skull.

Arthur Dieckrich, 1838 East 34th street, Lorain, wound on right hand.

BODIES OF TEN VICTIMS HERE

Among the many who lost their lives in the disaster at Lorain Saturday afternoon the following were cared for by Egyptian undertakers.

At the Sudro Funeral Home—Matilda Delidich of Avon; R. S. Richards, wife and two children of Columbus; also Wilbur Van Housen, age 4 or 5 years.

At the Taylor Funeral Home—George Copas of Lorain; Mary Kowolj of Lorain; an unidentified girl.

At the Jenkins Funeral Home—Stanley A. Williams of Lorain.

ANDREW SYZMKOWIAK DIES THIS MORNING

Andrew Syzmkowiak passed away at 7 o'clock this morning, age 70 years, 7 months and 22 days, leaving five children, Mrs. Kaczmarek of this city, Mrs. W. H. Wolman of Lorain, Mrs. A. Darobek also of Lorain, and S. Syzmkowiak and Ben Syzmkowiak of this city, and eleven grand children.

He was a resident of Berea for 30 years and for the last eleven years he has lived with his daughter, Mrs. L. Kaczmarek of this city.

Funeral services will take place at the Holy Cross church at 9 a. m. Thursday. Interment will take place at St. Adalbert's cemetery at Berea, Ohio.

CONRAD BATTENHOUSE, 53, DIED ON SUNDAY

Conrad Battenhouse, 53 died at Memorial hospital yesterday following an illness of several months. The deceased has been a resident of this city for 32 years, and was a member of the Woodmen and the Macabees.

He is survived by his wife, four brothers and a sister, Mrs. Anna Walker, California; Jacob of Russia, Phil, of Henrietta, Fred and William of California.

Funeral services will be held at the home, 181 Spruce street, Wednesday afternoon at 1:30, which will be private, and from St. Paul's church at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Bourquin. Burial at Amherst.

THEATRE

GRAND—This evening showing "Flowing Gold" a story of the oil fields. During a night terror and flood while millions and Anne Q. Nilson are struck in a clay shock, the oil strikes a well and the flames spread over the water. The oil gains the roof and the flames overturned throwing them into the water. The heroine rescues Sills. It's a thrilling story all the way.
 RIVOLI—"The Gold Diggers" a story concerning the search for the efforts of the oilmen to land rich husbands. It is a comedy play also and deals with a number of questions, that are of some interest, and they are told in a way that it makes a great sensation on those who witness it. There is plenty of fun and adventure making it an attractive picture.
 DREAMLAND—"Jack O' Clubs" a fine western drama with an excellent cast. Followed by a comedy.

NOW GETS AROUND LIKE A NEW MAN

Mr. Meyers Thanks "DRECO" for Relieving Rheumatism and Sharp Pains in Back.

"Dreco is certainly getting a great reputation out here, and after giving it a trial I'm convinced that nothing that has been said is too good for it," declares Mr. Henry H. Meyers, 114 Haynes St., Dayton, Ohio.

"Four bottles of this great remedy got right at the root of my trouble and relieved my rheumatism and those sharp shooting pains in the back quicker than I ever thought possible. I put my stomach in good condition, too, and now I'm free from indigestion and gas bloating, at last. My bowels are regular and I've an appetite like a horse and at night I sleep the whole night through waking up feeling like a young colt."

Dreco is natural—made from the pure, undiluted juices of 12 remarkable roots, barks, leaves and herbs which act directly on the stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels and blood, and tends to relieve constipation, headaches, rheumatism, catarrh, biliousness, dizzy spells, heart fluttering, gas on stomach and other troubles caused by weak and disordered systems.

Dreco is for sale at all druggists. Try it just one week and note the remarkable change in your feelings.

Avon Devastated By the Cyclone; One Dead, 3 Hurt

By C. F. McLAUGHLIN

One was killed and three injured by the hurricane which devastated French Creek, East Avon and Avon.

At least forty homes are demolished and the property damage is estimated at $150,000.

The dead.

MATHILDA DIEDERICH, 14, daughter of Art Diederich found in field, 250 feet from house.

The injured.

GEORGE ACKERMAN, arm broken, his house and barn leveled to ground, was in cellar at time.

WILLIAM JONES, chest crushed.

ART DIEDERICH, cut by broken glass, Diederich is in Memorial hospital, Elyria.

The following lost their homes: John Alten, Otto Fisher, George Ackerman, F. A. Henry (includes store and contents), Louis Knight.

Charles Knight, Cliff Knight, John Ulrich, John Moore, Frank Sver, George Eastling, — Delinski, Edward Mason, Cliff Holbrook, Andrew Barres, Marsh Krebs and Bob Klingenshira.

The sick daughter of E. A. Henry was blown out of bed when the side of the house blew out and was carried into a field.

At East Avon the Holy Trinity Catholic church was blown down. Nothing left standing but the walls.

The pastor, Rev. Alfred J. Wast, had his house considerably damaged, the east wall being entirely blown away, as well as his garage. His auto was found quite a distance in a field.

The store of Ed Henry was completely demolished, and the homes of the following nearly entirely wrecked:

Anthony Brandt, Mr. Born, John Stoup, Bernard Ulrich and Mrs. Miller.

At this point there are very few houses left standing. All telephone and telegraph wires are down and fallen trees block the roadway.

There are other industries including the Thew Automatic Shovel Company, which could be classed as one of its largest industries.

Lorain is really divided into two sections. One is the north end, which is considered the principal section of the city, and the other is the south end where is located the National Tube Company.

It is divided on the north section by Broadway as its principal thoroughfare and by 28th St. in the south section. The sections are one mile apart with the steel plant district being two miles from the loop, where is located the city hall and jail.

George Hoffman, former clerk of the council, is mayor. He is a Republican.

Prior to Tom Johnson, late of Cleveland, bringing the steel mills to Lorain Lorain's chief industry was the shipment to Buffalo by water of barrel staves. This furnished the inhabitants of Lorain and adjoining territory plenty of work and helped to clean out the forests.

Residential Part Hard Hit

The principal residential section is in the northern part, within several blocks and adjoining the shores of Lake Erie both east and west of Lorain. These sections were hardest hit by the cyclone.

Lorain is the largest city in Lorain county. The city as well as the county is named after Loraine in France. Heman Ely, founder of Elyria, liked the French community, because of its picturesque scenery which he claimed is almost exactly duplicated in Lorain and Lorain county.

Lorain was first known as Charleston but a little over fifty years ago this name was changed to Lorain.

Lorain has prospects of being a 100,000 city by 1930. To the west a tract of 3600 acres lies in abeyance for some gigantic industry controlled by Columbus, O., capitalists. This land was purchased twelve years ago for $600,000 and lies at the mouth of Beaver creek, four miles west of Lorain, and running to the Lorain city limits.

Yards of Steel Mill

It has generally been conceded that this tract will be used either as a gigantic railroad terminal and yards or another steel plant. There is a right-of-way for a railroad to the land. The bed had been built and two-thirds of the track laid when the work was suddenly halted.

Another big population boom for Lorain is seen in the purchase of the American Tin Plate Company of 6,000 acres lying just south of Lorain and midway between Elyria. Specifications for this plant when it is eventually erected will mean the expenditure, it is said, of $10,000,000 and the employment of upwards of 12,000 workers.

This project is heralded as a bigger boom than was Tom L. Johnson's gift to Lorain.

IN THE DAYS NEWS

The British Women's Symphony Orchestra, whose inaugural concert given recently in London proved a most notable occasion, has for its conductor Miss Gwynn.

Kimpton, whose work has been compared favorably with that of her most distinguished male contemporaries. Though she began her professional career as a violinist Miss Kimpton has always been connected with orchestral work. Even when she was still a student at a school of music she led—and often conducted—the orchestra. Later at school where she taught and in clubs which she founded, little bands grew up that did increasingly good work, and year by year the scope of her activities widened. All this time she was teaching herself to conduct, and though she

MISS HALCYON LOCKARD WEDS HUBERT ROE OLDFIELD

The marriage of Miss Halcyon Lockard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Lockard of Harvard, and Hubert Roe Oldfield, son of Mr. L. E. Oldfield of Midland, was celebrated at the Methodist Episcopal church at 1131 West avenue, Saturday afternoon, June 28, 1924. The bride was attractively dressed in white tulle and was attended by her sister, Miss Josephine Lockard. A wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edwin Kirby officiating. The bride was escorted by her father, and the groom by his father. The wedding party consisted of the bride, groom, bridesmaids, and best man. The reception was held at the home of the bride. The wedding was a very pretty affair.

MISS ZELMA FALKNER IS BRIDE OF ORLANDO HURST

The home of Mrs. Mary Falk of Cleveland road was the scene of a very pretty wedding Saturday evening when her daughter, Miss Zelma Falkner, became the bride of Orlando Hurst, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hurst of Cleveland road. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. C. Young, pastor of North Ridgeway Congregational church, officiating. The bride was escorted by her father, and the groom by his father. The wedding party consisted of the bride, groom, bridesmaids, and best man. The reception was held at the home of the bride. The wedding was a very pretty affair.

Gleanings Book of Life

Why is everything that is common contemptible? Why is common an expression of contempt, and why are common, extraordinary and distinguished denotations of approbation? Arthur Schopenhauer, whose name is associated with studies in pessimism, asks and answers these questions.

"Common in its original meaning denotes that which is peculiar to all men, i.e. shared equally by the whole species, and therefore an inherent part of its nature," he points out. "Accordingly, if an individual possesses no qualities beyond those which attach to mankind in general, he is a common man. Ordinary is much milder word, and refers to intellectual character; whereas common has more of a moral application."

"What value can a creature have that is not a whit different from millions of its kind? Millions of us say, 'I am a creature of creatures, which is the lot of all men, in never-ending Now. Nature sends bubbling up from her inexhaustible springs; as generous with them as the smith with the useless sparks that fly around his anvil."

"It is obviously quite right that a creature which has no qualities beyond those of the species should have to confine its claim to an existence entirely within the limits of the species, and live a life conditioned by those limits."

"I have argued" (in other words) "that whilst a lower animal possesses nothing more than the character of its species, man is the only being which can lay claim to possess an individual character. But in most men this individual character comes to very little in reality; and they may be almost all ranged under certain classes. Their thoughts and their desires, like their faces, are those of the species, or at any rate, those of the class to which they belong; and accordingly they are of a trivial, every-day, common character, and exist by the thousand."

"You can usually tell beforehand what they are likely to do and say. They have no special stamp or mark to distinguish them from the mass of manufactured goods, all of a piece."

"If, then, their nature is merged in that of the species, how shall their existence go beyond it? The curse of vulgarity puts men on a par with the lower animals, by allowing them none but a generic nature, a generic form of life."

"Anything that is high or great or noble must then, as a matter of course, and by its very nature, stand alone in a world where no better expression can be found to denote what is base and contemptible than that which I have mentioned as in general use, namely, common."

Arthur Schopenhauer is known in this country chiefly for his acid essay on women, which for often is taken in jest. The German was serious when he wrote it, endeavoring, as always, to be a penetrating observer of the fault of humanity.

FROM THE BOOK OF LIFE

MONTAIGNE

There is nowhere in literature a volume of self-revelation surpassing in candor the Essays of Michel de Montaigne. French, the student of the sixteenth century of the modern era, says, "He is frankly egotistical; yet modest and unpretentious; profoundly wise, yet constantly protesting his ignorance; learned, yet careless, forgetful and inconsistent," is one characterization of him.

"In proportion as useful thoughts are full and solid, so they are more cumbersome and heavy; vice, death, poverty, disease are grave and grievous subjects," is the way Montaigne begins one lengthy essay. "A man must have his soul instructed in the means to sustain and contend with evil, and in the rules of living and behaving well; he must likewise often rouse up, and exercise in this noble study. But in vulgar soul, it must be by intervals, and with moderation; it will otherwise grow besotted, if continually intense."

"When I was young, I had read of frequent self-solicitations and admonitions to keep me to my duty, gaiety and health, it is said, do not well agree with those grave and serious meditations. I am at present in another condition; the predispositions of age do but too much advertise and preach to me. 'From the excess of sprightliness I am fallen into that of gravity which is more trouble some; and for that reason I now purposely suffer myself to run into some little liberties, and sometimes unbind my youth with a few gay and foolish thoughts, in which to divert myself."

"I am grown now but too full, too heavy, and too ripe; my years read every day new lectures to me of coldness and temperance. This body of mine avoids disorder and dreads it; 'tis now my body's time to guide my mind towards reform; and to govern in its turn, and more rudely and impetuously than the other, it lets me not an hour alone, leaping or waking, but it is always preaching to me death."

Miss Margaret Glover, who is attending Kent Normal School, accompanied by a friend, Mr. Elmer Glover of Kent, who is taking post graduate work at the school, are guests yesterday of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Snyder of Lodi street.

COPAS FUNERAL SET FOR TUESDAY

The funeral services of George Copas, the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Copas of Twelfth street, who lost his life in the performance of duty just as much as any ambulance driver did in the World War, will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 p. m. from the late home with Rev. W. L. Walker officiating and burial at Ridgeway cemetery.

The deceased died at Memorial Hospital Sunday morning at eleven o'clock from burns sustained in an explosion at midnight Saturday when someone near him lit a match, while the gasoline tank on the ambulance which he was driving was being investigated prior to leaving.

He leaves two sisters, June and Marion, besides his parents and a host of friends who mourn his loss.

His age was twenty years three months and sixteen days at the time of his death.

ELYRIANS IN STORM'S PATH

Mrs. Dewey Hull and her three small children, Mrs. George Parks and infant son, Mrs. Cox, Mildred Bliss of Elyria were among those who were in the worst of the tornado Saturday and escaped. They were all in Mrs. Hull's machine in front of the Lorain postoffice at five o'clock when the storm broke. They had stopped to put on the side curtains. When the storm was at its worst they lay in the bottom of the machine.

Mrs. Cox received minor head injuries and Mildred was cut about the neck but the children were uninjured. Mrs. Park's baby son had his shoes and stockings blown off by the wind. The machine was not damaged badly although the top was blown off. After waiting two and a half hours for the rain storm, which followed, to stop they managed to start the car and came home.

DINNER STORIES

Mark Twain was subjected often to the importunities of young and aspiring authors who sought advice and, in some cases, asked him to read their manuscripts. One of these had accompanied his request with an inquiry as to right diet for an author, asking if it was true, as Professor Agassiz said, that fish was good brain food.

Mark Twain replied as follows: "Yes, Agassiz does recommend authors to eat fish, because the phosphorus in it makes the brain. So far you are correct. But I cannot help you to a decision about the amount you need to eat—at least, not to a certainty. If the specimen composition you send is about a fair average, I should judge that perhaps a couple of whales would be all you would want for the present. Not the largest kind, but simply good middling-sized whales."

Direct Action Gas Ranges

You put your baking directly into the cold Direct Action Oven. Do not light burner until baking is in, because oven heats almost instantaneously. This means a saving of time and gas as there is no wait to preheat the oven. You can do this with a Direct Action because of the open oven construction, with its absence of heavy oven bottoms and flues which, in other stoves, have to be heated before the oven is ready for the baking.

GEORGE COPAS KILLED BY BLAST

Mayton Sweet Also Seriously Burned and in Elyria Hospital as Result of Explosion on Saturday Evening

George Copas, died Sunday at Memorial hospital from injuries sustained Saturday evening when a lighted match resulted in the explosion of the gasoline tank of his auto.

Copas had stopped at the Hardway filling station on West street. Someone lit a match to light a smoke and it communicated with the gasoline.

In addition to the death, Clayton Sweet, who was in the auto with Copas, is in Memorial Hospital, badly burned.

Copas was driving an ambulance for Carl W. Taylor and was making trips to Lorain, bringing back to Elyria Memorial hospital injured from Lorain's cyclone catastrophe.

Copas is 20 years of age and resides at 318 Twelfth street. Sweet lives at 125 Oak street.

Funeral services will be held from the late home at two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon in charge of Rev. Walker with burial in Ridgeway cemetery.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1924, by Mammouth Picture Service, Inc.

The Warning for Lillian That Dicky Gave Madge.

A Dicky's questions concerning Lillian I felt my mental bristles rising sharply—I told myself contemptuously—as might a peary old cat in the presence of something she did not understand.

But my common sense told me that while his first query concerning her reasons for staying in our apartment while we were away was a perfectly natural one the last one was strained and justified my suspicion that he wished to learn Lillian's attitude toward the Marks family, and their beautiful protégée, Mollie Fawcett.

There must be no hint of my suspicion in my answer, however. I knew my husband's uncertain temper well enough to skirt that precipice, and I waited until I was sure my voice was absolutely unruffled before I answered.

"I don't think she's given them a thought," I replied mendaciously, then put a query of my own in apparently idle fashion.

"Why should she do any 'leuthing stunts' in that direction? I know you're prejudiced against the Marks, but I think you're wrong, and I'm sure Lillian hasn't seen anything amiss with them. What opportunity has she had to observe them, even if she had any suspicion concerning them?"

"Prejudiced against them?" Dicky retorted, patently seizing upon the words which struck him forcibly. "Where do you get that stuff? Because I didn't take to the cut of Pety's fib, and the buzz-saw voice of his spouse, is that any reason why I should think them a bunch of crooks needing an eminent investigator on their trail?"

Daddy's Memory Wakes.

He was actually shouting the last words, and I felt a little shiver stealing down my spine as I realized that the idea of Lillian investigating the Marks family was not only distasteful to him, but actually alarmed him.

All the suspicions engendered by Dicky's absorbed interest in Mollie Fawcett—suspicions which I determinedly had crushed, scoring myself savagely for what I termed my senseless jealousy—sprang suddenly into hydro-headed life again.

What did Dicky know concerning the doings of the family in the rear, and how had he obtained the knowledge? Of course, I realized that there was no element of consideration for the Marks family in the conversation he was unconsciously manifesting. But that he was genuinely concerned over Lillian's possible investigations was evident, and there was but one possible conclusion.

There must be something queer on foot, "I put it mildly—something in which Mollie Fawcett was involved, and my husband knew what it was and feared for her.

My memory flew back to the night when Dicky had come home with a wound upon his head bound up with handkerchiefs and a scarf which I later had discovered to be Mollie Fawcett's. Indeed, Dicky had admitted as much when I taxed him with the embarrassing fact only the night before, and I should not soon forget his savage anger at my discovery.

"A Whin in Lill's Ear."

Difficult, indeed, was it for me to hold my temper and my pulse and answer him equably. But I knew that I would gain no information by anger.

Reverend, within a few minutes we should be at the farmhouse where Dicky's mother was eagerly awaiting our arrival that she might finish her preparations for her trip with her son to her daughter Harriet's home in Michigan.

That she was extremely nervous and her temper uncertain, or, rather, certainly bad, I was sure, and I was firm in the determination to do nothing which would upset her before her journey.

I decided that an apparent misunderstanding of his meaning would serve me best, and I spoke with apparent pettishness.

"What's the use of flying off the handle like that?" I demanded crossly. "I didn't mean you thought them crooks. You've certainly said that times enough."

"Neither do I," Dicky swallowed the bait, evidently desisting that this was his chance to make his annoyance appear plausible. "That female with the callow voice and her not husband sure do get on my nerves. But that doesn't mean I think them crooks."

"However," he went on, "I should worry what happens to them. I believe you ought to put a flea in Lill's ear, though. If you think she really is investigating them, she'll only make herself ridiculous."
